CONTRIBUTOR LIMELIGHT

Colton Marsala – Photographer

Joining the SLUG team in July of 2016, Colton Marsala has photographed an impressive range of stories. From concert/event coverage to features about local businesses, Marsala has approached each assignment and challenge with tenacity and creativity. Shooting concerts is Marsala's favorite type of SLUG photo assignment, and few things get Marsala's adrenaline going like shooting from the pit. In that vein, Marsala values being a SLUG photographer because it allows him to help develop content that keeps people informed with happenings in Salt Lake City, and he loves being a part of something that promotes our community. Marsala believes in SLUG's mission to support and promote smaller organizations—those who work hard at perfecting their craft. You can see Marsala's photo essay on Michael Ori for this month's Local Photography Issue on SLUGMag.com.

Salt Lake loves heavy music, which isn't a mystery—especially when it comes to the local hardcore scene. However, instead of treading the beaten path, Liar's Tongue carve their own with a thrashier sound. "When we first started, we wanted to mix heavy with thrash to make a more crossover sound," Tyler Statler (guitar) says. "I think we really did that well, but now we're leaning more towards riffy, groovy, thrashy, fast-paced, two-step shit." Liar's Tongue are multifaceted, and they prove it as they develop and grow their signature take on the genre.

MIDDLE: Dea Giokas (Vocals)

RIGHT: Hunter Franks (Guitar).

After the mysterious appearance of their Instagram account to the release of their Spring 2019 demo, Absent have made themselves a highly anticipated act in the hardcore scene. While they have only been together since the beginning of the year, they've been quickly working toward recording music, playing shows and even booking a West Coast tour this summer.

When it comes to their sound, Absent stray from the current metalcore trend and are focusing on a crossover approach. By extracting influences and inspirations from bands like Malice at the Palace, Creeping Death, Metallica and

Suburban Scum, they create a thrashy, hardcore, death/black metal-hybrid that creeps and haunts just as much as it pummels and annihilates.

The goal with Absent is changing the mold. "We have no interest in playing the typical beatdown, metalcore shit," Theisen says. While they may get pigeonholed as metalcore due to their thick, heavy metallic sound, the lack of panic chords and inclusion of blackened, thrashy riffs in their place make them stand out in Salt Lake City's heavy music landscape.

"Can you be an artist and a mother?" SLC multimedia artist Céline Downen (@celinedownen) asks me this question as a sort of setup, knowing that yes, of course you can—you must. Art subsists on the life of the artist. The brighter, tougher question buried underneath is "What art is made possible by virtue of being a mother?" The Quotidian Details, Downen's exhibition opening at Finch Lane on June 14, offers us so many answers—each one provokes even more questions about our relationship to home, personal space and daily work.

A year ago, Céline Downen set out to document life as both artist and mother. The Quotidian Details explores how ingrained Downen's sense of motherhood is in her art. "Strawberry Season" is a series of 16 cyanotypes made from stray strawberry stems and leaves her children have left lying around her home. "I thought a lot about how birds build nests, using not just twigs but many unexpected materials," Downen says. "In the same way, my workspace seeps out into my home space." For Downen, they're inseparable.

Core to Downen's process is observation. As a mother to two children, Downen finds that her workspace and home seep into each other. All around, she discovers leftovers of her family's days, particularly her children. For instance, rather than throw away the stray strawberry leaves and stems her kids discarded, Downen collected the leaves and created "Strawberry Seasons," making elegant art out of waste. "I challenge myself to use these materials around me," she says. "I'm embracing what my life is rather than trying to put on a façade of being something else, whatever that would be." Visit Finch Lane on 1340 E. 100 South in Salt Lake City, June 14 through Aug. 2, to see The Quotidian Details.

PUPUSAS PILED HIGH at El Viroleño

Words by James Bennett
bennett.james.m@gmail.com

Coming seemingly straight from Central America, El Viroleño puts a local spin on traditional food from El Salvador. The pupusas and tamales are plentiful—the Carne Asada and Chile Relleno plates are comforting and familiar. There is not a single savory offering on the menu that hits a sour note. And where the 800 South corridor may not seem like a food destination to some, diners who choose to venture out that way will be rewarded with plentiful portions of quality food at rock-bottom prices.

When viewing a photographer's portfolio, you can grasp within the first few seconds what they're trying to communicate through their photos. However, with Trent Nelson (trentnelson.net), predictability is not a niche in which he feels comfortable—beginning as a photographer for local hardcore shows and becoming one of the few visual documenters of the FLDS community, his work is anything but one note. Being rooted in punk and hardcore has taught him not to take everything at face value and that people with whom he never expected to find common ground were actually more relatable than he'd anticipated.

The concept for the DE | MARCATION portfolio emerged when co-creator Amy Jorgenson visited Tucson, Arizona, in January 2016. During her visit, Jorgenson discovered group portfolios of photographers' work from the '70s. These portfolios sparked an idea for Jorgenson, to bring this idea of a collection of today's working photographers back to Utah. Together with Edward Bateman, Head of Photography and Digital Imaging Area at the University of Utah, Jorgenson discovered and reached out to a collection of prominent professional photographers who hail from our very own Beehive State. DE | MARCATION is the first attempt to articulate what is happening in photography in Utah. Bound by a red-burnt-orange casing (with print and design help from the Red Butte Press), the physical portfolio wraps around the collection of works like a capsule, cradling this very moment in time for Utah photography. The portfolio currently resides at Granary Arts at 86 N. Main St. in Ephraim, Utah, and will be up until Sept. 27.

"The act of photographing is kind of aggressive and male," says photographer Jamie Harper (@jamielovegood), noting the detached way in which landscape photographers typically address their subjects. "That's what [Landscapes for Her] is about—I'm making these landscapes pink to overtly indicate that women have a place within photographing the land," compounded by a commentary that "women are born consumers"—hence the use of a stereotypical pink color scheme.

In 2017, Tiana Birrell (tianabirrell.com) obtained a MFA for Photography at the Art Institute of Chicago. Also, a Digital Matters Fellow, Birrell's latest art installation, Drifting through the Digital, represents a tangible way of exploring the digital realm. Birrell states that her piece is "an attempt to bring invisible structures and infrastructure to visibility." Her work explores the physical channels that feed the West's increasing demand for data storage. Birrell's exhibit will be available for viewing at the University of Utah's Marriott Library through June 1.

Ah, summertime! 'Tis the season where the nights get warmer and shorter. If you live in Utah, there's so much shit you can do that you can't or won't always do during the three inferior seasons. Whatever you like to do is fine, but for this article, I thought I would share with you warm readers what a lot of my friends and I like to do in the summertime.

The first and probably most popular summertime activity I'll address is complaining about the temperature via Facebook. Complaining about the temperature is so hilarious to me because we can't do shit about how hot it gets.

Another one of my favorite summertime activities is chillin' out in the kitty pool. Real swimming takes too much energy, and I'm lazy. I like lounging in six inches of cool-cold backyard hose-water with my legs over the edge and sipping on some tall boys. Although, I don't know why they are called kitty pools because I've never seen a cat use one. Most cats hate water—they should call them little-people pools, in my opinion. [Editor's note: Yeah, we know.]

MIKE BROWN'S GUIDE TO SUMMERTIME!

Words by Mike Brown • mgb90210@gmail.com || Photo by Kaylynn Gonzalez

Though Mike Brown claims he's too lazy to go "real swimming," we were able to expand, deepen and fill with water his "kitty pool." We've heard of wearing sunglasses inside, but he's taking it to the next level wearing sunglasses underwater ...

The other thing I like about kitty pools is that they are the Swiss Army knife of summer activities. You can utilize those things for way more than just lounging. Dump a couple bags of ice in that fucker, and you got a big-ass backyard beer chiller. And after you're done lounging in it, you can throw a bunch of Jell-O pudding packets in there—and bam! Backyard pudding wrestling! That's a tough one to top for summertime activity, and if you are having a backyard barbecue—another popular summertime activity—you just killed two birds with one stone by having awesome pudding wrestling for entertainment and then pudding for dessert!

GREAT PHOTOGRAPHY STARTS HERE

Adaptability. It's about remaining fluid, open. Preparing for nothing, but being ready for anything. Thriving in whatever situation comes along. The Z Series is perhaps the most adaptable cameras Nikon has ever created. It's at the sweet spot of speed, resolution and low-light performance. All combined with the advantages of a lightweight mirrorless design, a revolutionary new full-frame lens mount with matched lenses and seamless integration with Nikon's DSLR system—including the F-Mount NIKKOR lenses you love. This is mirrorless versatility as only Nikon could create.
